DESCRIPTION:

Traveling within the Kisoji area is a trip back in time to sleepy post towns of the last century. It was once a section of the old Nakasendo Highway joining Kyoto and present day Tokyo. Roughly following the Kiso River, these once-important post towns, Tsumago and Magome, form a preserved, living museum of the era and the perfect destination for a short escape from modern day life. Esthetically lacking the power lines and concrete buildings that spoil so many Japanese historical sites, Kisoji is a world of old Japanese inns, delightful mountain views, bamboo forests, rambling brooks turning water wheels, looms, lanterns, and beautiful handicrafts. You also can experience to make soba and eat it with tempura. The tour will be one of your most memorable Japanese outings we believe (<http://bit.ly/KISOJI>).
